

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An inspection method for cream solder for determining whether or not the shape of the cream solder is appropriate based on information on the height of the cream solder by irradiating light from substantially besides in two directions opposing each other through a lighting means to the cream solder so as to obtain at least two images and obtaining a difference between the obtained images.